An Excerpt from Tis The Season For Lady Sarah

Lady Sarah sat by the fire, reading a book. She was so engrossed in her story that she didn't notice Lord Edward enter the room.

"My lady," he said, his voice soft and deep.

Lady Sarah looked up, startled. "My lord," she said, her cheeks flushing slightly.

Lord Edward smiled. "I did not mean to startle you, my lady." He sat down next to her on the sofa. "I hope I am not interrupting your reading?"

"Not at all," Lady Sarah said. "I was just finishing up."

Lord Edward took the book from her and placed it on the table. "May I?" he asked.

Lady Sarah nodded. "Of course."

Lord Edward opened the book to the page she had been reading. He began to read aloud, his voice rich and smooth.

Lady Sarah listened, her eyes closed. She could feel herself being transported to another time and place. She could smell the fresh air and hear the birds singing. She could feel the warm sun on her skin.

When Lord Edward finished reading, he looked up and smiled at Lady Sarah. "That was lovely," he said. "Thank you for sharing it with me."

Lady Sarah smiled back. "You are welcome," she said.

They sat in silence for a moment, each lost in their own thoughts.

"I should go," Lord Edward said finally.

Lady Sarah nodded. "Yes, I suppose you should."

Lord Edward stood up and walked towards the door. He turned and looked at Lady Sarah one last time.

"I hope to see you again soon," he said.

Lady Sarah smiled. "I hope so too," she said.

Lord Edward opened the door and walked out. Lady Sarah watched him go, her heart filled with a mix of hope and trepidation.
